

MCJ BRICKS

Kagung Village is always a hive of activity as locals in all forms of automobile vehicles converge at MCJ Bricks for all things construction related.

Mmapule Jele and Masabata Sekete are the brick merchants behind the booming hardware brand located in Kuruman. They conceived the company after seeing locals travel long trips daily to the city center to purchase construction materials and losing a lot of money from buying substandard products available on the market

They opted to buy their own machinery to make bricks instead of reselling bricks from other sources. Their brand proved popular as it was more affordable and durable unlike the cheap imports that people were being forced to buy because of lack of local suppliers.

They now manufacture their own range of bricks ranging from maxi red, grey, block and solid bricks. They even supply building materials such a sand, stones, cement, tubing and wiring materials on site in Kagung.

“We want to be the main construction material suppliers here in Kuruman, then spread our wings to other towns and cities in Northern Cape” said Jele.

“Our products are the right standard and have been tested and approved by the local standards board, unlike the poor quality materials sold in other hardware shops around town”, added Sekete.
